

Video Title: Meet Aaron

When I was thinking the careers, a lot of the things I was looking at after was how does it affect people because for me I always sort of think what I'm doing, does it have any sort of contribution to others and is it a positive contribution? So, for me, when I was thinking about where I wanted to go, definitely the likes of the Central Bank. It's about how you contribute to the community and the environment.

The Grad Programme; it's three years, it's two 18-month rotations. It looks at who you are rather than what you know. For me, like, I taught coming in with a Masters in Banking Risk Management, I was like oh I'm gonna know so much but I think when you get into reality you definitely realise that there's so much more to learn and to understand.

At the moment we're on a hybrid model of work. So, if I was in the office I'd sort of have it geared more towards meetings which can be internal meetings with sort of my Head of Function which would be my version of senior management or else meetings with my team. Because I work in Banking Supervision, we look at risk areas so how does things get from the bottom up to the let's say the highest part of the bank so like the board or the senior management of the banks? So, that's kind of the things I'd be looking at at a day-day.

If you want to do any further training whether it's a Masters or a professional set of exams, you can just apply. So, for myself, I'm looking at a set of exams called FRM which is a Financial Risk Manager, which would enhance sort of the areas that I look at.

My name is Aaron Frahill and I believe I make a difference working for the Central Bank of Ireland
