1. Introduction

This policy sets out the guidelines and processes to be followed in relation to the application of a probationary period for employees on appointment and promotion within the Central Bank of Ireland (the 'Central Bank').

2. Objective

A probationary period is a specified period of time during which an employee's overall suitability for a role is formally assessed. Probation is intended to be a positive, collaborative process which provides an opportunity to allow:

1. The newly appointed or promoted employee to integrate into the role and/or organisation;
2. For a fair assessment of an employee's performance, behaviour and overall suitability to the role and;
3. A recommendation in relation to the employee's suitability for continued employment is made by the line manager.

3. Scope

The Probation Policy applies to all employees on probation (either on new appointment or promotion within the organisation).

4. Policy Details

4.1 Duration of the Probationary Period

- i. A probationary period of six months will apply which, in certain circumstances, may be extended to no more than ten months in total. Any extensions are at the discretion of the Central Bank.
- ii. A shorter probationary period will apply for employees appointed to a short fixed term contract as outlined in Table 1. Probation extensions will apply to short-term contracts on an exceptional basis only, at the absolute discretion of the Central Bank.

- iii. In all cases, the probationary period provided for in the employees’ terms and conditions of employment applies.

Table 1: Probationary Period Duration

Contract Duration	Probationary Period Duration
≤6 month duration	2 month probationary period
>6 but < 12 month duration	3 month probationary period
≥ 12 month duration	6 month probationary period

4.2 During Probation

- i. The line manager is required to hold regular review meetings during probation with the employee, at which feedback on the employee’s performance and progress should be discussed, and any learning and development needs should be identified where appropriate.
- ii. Probation progress reports are issued by the Human Resources Division (HRD) at approximately two and a half months and five and a half months. These intervals will vary for those completing a shorter probationary period.
- iii. The line manager is required to chair each meeting and complete these reports thereafter in a fair and objective manner. Reports must be signed-off by local management (usually Deputy Head level upwards or equivalent as stated on the report). The employee is provided with a copy of each progress report for discussion and sign off.
- iv. The final meeting must be held prior to the final progress report being returned to HRD by the date indicated on the report. It is the responsibility of local management to ensure meetings are held and probation reports are issued to HRD by the specified deadlines.
- v. Employee requests for internal transfers will not be facilitated during the probationary period.

4.3 Dealing with underperformance during probation

- i. Where performance is below standard, or there are other issues for concern, the employee will be advised at the earliest possible stage including specific task or behavioural examples.

- ii. The line manager will provide feedback and reasonable support in order to help the employee to reach the expected standard.
- iii. Similarly, the line manager should advise the HR Advisory Manager or his/her nominee of any concerns at the earliest possible stage. HRD will provide guidance and support to line managers on how best to manage the situation.

4.4 At the End of Probation

The line manager is required to make a recommendation prior to the end of the probationary period on:

- i. whether the individual has successfully completed probation and will be offered continued employment; or
- ii. whether the probationary period should be extended, or
- iii. whether the individual has not successfully completed probation which could ultimately lead to the termination of their employment contract or reversion to a previous grade in a situation where an employee was promoted

5. Outcomes of the Probationary Period

5.1 Successful completion of probation

Where the final progress report recommends continued employment, HRD will issue a letter to the employee to confirm successful completion of the probationary period.

5.2 Extension of Probationary Period

For employees completing a six-month probationary period, the Central Bank reserves the right to extend the probation to no longer than ten months where it considers it appropriate to do so. Probation extension does not automatically apply in any case and will only be applied where the Central Bank considers it appropriate. Where the final progress report recommends an extension of the probationary period, the employee will be advised in writing as to the reasons for the extension, the period during which these concerns must be addressed and the consequences of failing to do so. HRD will issue this written notification following consultation with the line manager.

In cases where an employee is absent from work during their probation period on protective leave such as Maternity Leave, Paternity Leave, Parental Leave, Carer's Leave and Adoptive Leave the probationary period shall be deemed to be suspended for the duration of the absence and shall be completed by the employee on return to work from such absence. This may also apply in other cases of significant or frequent absence during the probationary period due to illness or other reasons.

5.3 Termination of Employment

Where the final progress report recommends termination of employment the employee will be given no less than one week's notice or the notice stated in the terms of employment, and the following process will apply;

- i. The line manager or local management representative, and a representative from HRD will hold a meeting with the employee to advise him/her of the recommendation and the reasons for it. The purpose of the meeting will be to discuss the probation recommendation and to allow the employee the opportunity to respond to the issues raised in the probation reports and the recommendation.
- ii. The employee will be entitled to be accompanied by a work colleague or Union representative at this meeting.
- iii. Following this meeting, the line manager/local management representative will consider all information and confirm a final decision in writing to the employee.
- iv. Should the decision be to terminate employment, the employee will have the right to appeal to the Employee Relations Manager. Any such appeals should be made in writing within three working days of issue of notice.
- v. The Central Bank reserves the right to pay in lieu of notice on termination of employment.

5.4 Reverting to Previous Grade following Promotion

Where the final progress report recommends a reversion of an employee to their previous grade due to underperformance in the new role during probation, the employee will return to his/her previous grade (including terms and conditions) and the point on that grade's scale which was effective immediately prior to promotion. This can occur at any stage during the probationary period and will be subject to one week's notice. (This will not apply in cases where the reason for termination is of a disciplinary nature.) If reverting to a previous grade, the period of time spent at the promoted grade may count towards increment accrual at the lower grade.

On receipt of the final progress report not recommending the person for the new role, the following process will apply:

- i. The line manager or local management together with a representative from HRD will hold a meeting with the employee to advise him/her of the recommendation and the reasons for it.
- ii. The purpose of the meeting will be to discuss the probation recommendation and to allow the employee the opportunity to respond to the issues raised in the probation reports and the recommendation.
- iii. The employee will be entitled to be accompanied by a work colleague or Union representative at the meeting.
- iv. Following this meeting, the line manager or local management will consider all information and confirm a final decision in writing.
- v. Should the decision be to return the employee to his/her previous grade, the employee will have the right to appeal to a senior member of the Employee Relations Unit (Any such appeal should be made in writing within three working days of receipt of notice of probation outcome).
- vi. The nature of the position to which the employee reverts and the effective date, will be determined by the line manager or the relevant business area. It will be the responsibility of the line manager to source a suitable role for the employee. The nature of the position should be discussed with your HRD representative. Subsequently, it is the line manager's responsibility to update HR Support of any employment details change, such as role title, grade, salary, effective date of change.
- vii. Upon receipt of these details, HR Support will issue a letter to the staff member informing them of the contractual changes with the effective date of change.

6. Grievance/Dignity at Work Procedure for New Entrant Probationary Employees

The Central Bank's Grievance Procedures, Disciplinary Procedures and Dignity at Work complaint procedures do not apply to probationary employees.

An employee who is on probation on their appointment to the Central Bank's employment (as distinct from being on probation on their promotion) may raise a formal grievance or complaint on any matter related to their employment, such as working relationships or the application of terms and conditions of employment in accordance with the following procedures only:

- i. The employee will submit the complaint in writing to the relevant line manager/supervisor. The line manager/supervisor will meet with the employee to investigate the matter and thereafter issue a decision in writing on the matter, normally within 5 working days of receipt of the written complaint. Where it is not appropriate for the direct line manager/supervisor to investigate, the matter should be referred to the relevant HR Business Partner who will arrange for an alternative line manager/supervisor to investigate.
- ii. If the employee is still dissatisfied following the outcome, they may notify the relevant HR Business Partner that they want to appeal the decision. Notification of appeal must be in writing and must set out the grounds for appeal and be sent to the relevant HR Business Partner within 2 working days of issue of the decision. The HR Business Partner will then arrange for an appropriate HRD or other colleague to hear the appeal. The appeal decision will subsequently be confirmed in writing and issued to the employee, normally within 5 working days of receipt of the notification of appeal from the employee.
- iii. The employee may be accompanied by a colleague or a recognised trade union representative at any meetings in this process.
- iv. The Central Bank will not continue to process complaints/grievances where the employee's employment has been terminated.
- v. In certain circumstances, e.g. where a complaint/grievance is raised by a probationary employee in contemplation of being, or after having been, informed that they are not recommended for permanent appointment, the Central Bank reserves the right to place the probationary employee on special leave with pay for the purposes of facilitating an investigation.
- vi. For the avoidance of doubt, newly hired employees who are on probation may raise grievances or complaints using this procedure only. However, where an employee is confirmed as having successfully completed probation then the appropriate procedures for raising grievances/complaints or Dignity at Work matters are the Central Bank of Ireland Grievance Procedure and; the Central Bank of Ireland Dignity at Work: Appropriate Workplace Behaviour policy.

7. Procedure for Dealing with Misconduct for New Entrant Probationary Employees

The Central Bank of Ireland Disciplinary Procedure will not apply to new entrant probationary employees. In cases of alleged misconduct against a new entrant probationary employee, the following procedure will apply:

- i. The employee will be informed of the allegation(s) in writing and requested to attend a meeting of a disciplinary nature with an impartial line manager and HR representative
- ii. The employee will be advised of their right to be accompanied at the meeting by a colleague or a recognised trade union representative and advised that the outcome of the meeting could result in any of the following:
 - a. Final written warning
 - b. Dismissal with notice for misconduct
 - c. Dismissal without notice for serious misconduct
- iii. The employee will be given an opportunity at the meeting to respond to the allegation(s).
- iv. Following the meeting the employee will be advised in writing of the outcome.
- v. The employee will have the right to appeal the decision to a more senior manager. Any request for an appeal should be notified in writing to HR within 2 days of receipt of the written outcome and must set out the grounds for appeal.
- vi. The outcome of the appeal will be communicated in writing normally within 5 working days of receipt of the notification of appeal from the employee.

- vii. The Central Bank reserves the right to place the probationary employee on special leave with pay during all stages of this procedure.
