

Title: Can you send a payment from your bank instantly to another bank?

Generally I would use Revolut because they were kind of the first to the party but Bank of Ireland recently have come out with their own version.

My daughter has showed me how to do it from bank to bank, yeah, I just do it online.

No, I send it from Revolut, from normal bank to Revolut, Revolut to...because it goes instantly, normal bank takes 24 hours. It's at least 24, 48 hours I would say before I can actually get somebody the money.

My wife's account is on my account, so in a different bank. So if I wanted to give her money, it just goes straight away.

Not that I know of, I've never done it. Depends on what bank it is now, my bank is AIB and Revolut as well so if I'm sending like between AIB and AIB it's quick enough yeah and Revolut as well to all the banks is quickly enough, but if it's AIB to say Bank of Ireland or a different bank, it's not as quick.

My parents would, yeah, with me, but I wouldn't, no. I'd use Revolut more often yeah, it's just easier, can send it to anyone, that's really it.

Yeah, just through a bank transfer, standard enough. Depends if it's someone I know, probably Revolut, but maybe business or other stuff is through bank transfer.

Yeah it just seems so much easier and more efficient. Saves me having to physically walk into the branch and ask them to transfer the money. So yeah.

Find out more: centralbank.ie/wordonthestreet